W. P. WALTON,

THE 49th Congress is among the things that were. Its record is made up; its work is done and "tramp, tramp, tramp the boys are marching" home, many of the timeservers, praise God, never to return. However, its sine of omission exceed those of commission, thanks to a brave and true President, and on the whole there is perhaps almost as much to extol as to deplore. It omitted to redeem its promlees of tariff reduction, the more's the pity, but it settied the presidential succession and the methods of the electoral count; restored to the public domain millione of acres of forfeited land, repealed the tenure of office act, granted pensions to the neglected Mexican sotdlers, etc. The Interstate Commerce bill, regarded as an important meas ure, is another item to the credit or the discredit of the body which time must decide. All in all the 49th Congress was no worse than its predecessor and in many things it was infinitely better.

THERE is no occasion for anyhody reading Randali out of the democratic party; he has performed that little service very effectively for himself. Objecting to any tariff reduction unless he was permitted to suggest the plan, which was in entire sympathy with that of the republicans, he prevented the fulfillment of the democratic promise of a reduction of war taxee. Then he not only voted for the pauper pension hill, originally, but cast his mits with the republicans to pass it over the president's very unanswershle objections. It is said that he is anxious to run for president, believing that he has made himself solid with the soldier element and magnified his importance with the so-called protection wing of the democratic party. A straightout republican is preferable to this masker in politics and for one we should almost as lief see the former elected as chief execu-

DIEGUSTED at the reception from the members of his party everywhere he has been, Gen. Cassius Marcellus Clay has decided that he is not wanted and consequently has withdrawn from the canvass for the gubernatorial nomination. He says he has been badly treated nearly everywhere he went, and at no place has a respectable audience in size greeted him. The committeemen of his party have ignored him and either refused to give notice of his appointment or purposedly had them printed wrong. Gen. Clay should have known better than to be wasting good money and valuable breath on a party bound to such idols as Bill Bradley. It was more than kicking against the pricks for him to strive against such a competitor and shows that when a man loses his youth he also loses his judg-

CLEVELAND has sarned the title of "Old Veto" and the country oweshim a issting obligation for the firmness and the conscientiousness with which he has stood between it and numberless raids upon its treasury. The number of his vetoes, and they were all austained saye two of lesser importance, by a subsequent vote of Congrees, reach 132, which exceeds those of all the other Presidents combined by 21. He has made many enemies among those who want to bankrupt the country, but the true patriot loves him for making such enemies, and a fervent "God hiese his old soul" wells up from one end of the nation to the other.

MR. HOAR, from his seat in the Senate, criticised severely the conduct of Speaker Carliele in refueing to permit Mr. Randall and his following to ofler bills for the repeal of certain internal revenue taxes, but when Senators Beck and Blackburn got through with him he looked more like a grease spot than the greatest American Senator that he thinks he is. Joe was especiaily eevere on the Massachusetts statesman and as good as called him a liar on ceveral counts.

GOV. MCCREARY'S pet measure, the establishment ol an agricuiturai department. with a cabinet officer at the head, failed because of its amendments that the Senate tacked on to it, never reaching consideration by the House, which originally passed it. We have never been as much in love with the proposition as the governor, heing unable to see how it will help the farmer as he thinks it wili.

THE action of the Democratic State Central Committee in fixing Saturday, April 23d as the day upon which delegates to the State convention shall be chosen ail over the State, was a wise one and ought to be strictly complied with. It is fairer to the candidates, regular in proceeding and may save the annoyance of contesting delega tions.

THE democrats in the Senate succeeded. notwithstanding the adverse report by the committee on the confirmation of the colored man, Trotter, to he recorder of deeds at Weshington, in having him confirmed. hut a majority of the rich republican Senators went "agin the d-n negur" as usual.

THE Virginians probably do not want the earth, but there are those of them who would take quite a considerable slice. The heirs of the late Daniei McDonaid, of Richmond, ctaim the site upon which the city of Louisville is built end want to institute suit for it.

-The Senate confirmed the nominations of J. B. Willie and W. J. Denman to be Postmasters at Richmond and Nicholaswille, respectively.

W. P. WALTON, Sec'y. JUDGE FOX, the prohibition candidate for governor, is a very modest man, we should judge by his remark, "The ticket is the best one morally and intellectually ever nominated in Kantucky." Perhaps the jedge forgets that "self-praise is half scandal." A gentieman here who knows him well eave that the judge is perfectly sincere in his deciaration, at least so far as the head of the tickht is concerned.

THE lest election for Senator has occurred and the result shows that the next Senate will stand 38 republicans and 37 democrats, not counting Riddlebergar, of Virglnia, who votes as he pleases occasionally, but for the most part with the republicane.

AFTER blring a hall and getting only 30 people to come and hear him speak in Louisville, we don't hlame Gen. Clay for being diagusted. He had almost as bad an experience here, hardly a corporal's guard of his own party turning out to hear him.

THE great preacher, Henry Ward Beecher, was stricken with apoplexy Saturday and at an early hour Monday morning he was still alive, but slnking rapidly and lisble to die at any moment.

WAR AT PAINT LICK. The Troublesome Best Boys Raise Another Row and Fortunately Get the Worst of it. [Special to the INTERIOR JOURNAL.]

PAINT LICK, Mar. 6, 10:20 A. M. 5 o'clock last evening William and Humphrey Best, George Roberts and John Hensley froze to death. It is believed the reversal came into our town with war on their faces. Ike Arnold, a peaceable citizen was going from the postoffice to his home. Humphrey Best and Hensley followed him from Ward Brothers' store to the depot, Humphrey called to Mr. Arnold to stop that he wanted to see him. Arnold replied "all right" and turned back to meet him se he walked up. Humphrey sald to Arnold, "You have said something about me I don't like." Arnold replied, "If you don't like moh at San Marcos, Texas. He was a ne. it you can help yourself." Humphrey then gro, and unsuccessfully assaulted an aged jumped off of the platform with his hand on his pistol and said, "If you come any further I will shoot a hole in your head? ha har-tender, was to be cremated, have In the mean time Hensley was standing hehind Arnold with his hand on his piatol. He saw he had no showing and said to them, "Gentlemen, I am not armed, but if you will wait here two minutes I will see that he will return to his constituents, ex- you." He then went home and got his something of a sensational character and over in town. Arnold thinking the matter was settled went home, got his supper and -The death is reported from Springfield hitched up his horse and got his little girls of Helen Jeffrles, a colored woman, aged in the carriage to take them to singing to the sale of the latter, are false from he-

Best then pulled out his pistol and cast a republican vote in his life, for the said, "God d-n it, we will settle right sale of the Leader, which was to he made a him with their hands on their pistols, reason to believe a combination was pergan to curse them and told them, "God Echo wheraby the Leader was to be perverd-n you, you can kili me but you can't ted to radioal uses, we lost no time in in scare me." About that time Ike Arnold forming the gentleman that the trade was drove up with his children in the carriage, off and even before "Mr. Martin had come Humphrey Best said, "John Lackey we have not got anything against you, but if that one time that angel of innocence and Ike Arnoid comes to that singing God purity, its editor, hargained, agreed and d-n hlm I'm going to kill him." Mr. Arnold took his children home and got his double barrel shot gun and went to the self to publish no paper here at all; and at singing. Everything went on nicely until the desperadoes came in and began to cut up. Arnold had his gun on the desk in front of him; Humphrey Beet walked back and took his seat in front of Arnold and reached back to get the gun. Arnold got the gun first. Humphrey said to hlm, "I don't want your d-n gun," and Arnold eald, "If you do you can't get it." Humphrey then attempted to draw his pistol, islature from Bourbon by the Democratic but Arnold was too quick and got the drop on him. Humphrey then broke to run out the door and hallooed, "Come here hoys" nold was shot in the right arm, Humphrey

emigrauts from the south.

The houses were mostly round pole cablus, cabins had cracks all around "that a dog ould jump through." If the floor was any thing else than bare ground it was made of puncheons, or slabs, split out and smoothed floor, one at each and and one in the middle. The roof was not nailed and had no rafters. At the caves the end legs projected at each corner a foot or two beyond the walls, and logs were then put up, the gables, of course, upright, while the slde logs were "drawn in to shape the roof." On these logs clapboards were Inid, four foot boards being generally used, and held down by "weight poles." pole was laid on each course of boards, and these poles were kept in place by blocks or

try. "Bed scaffolds" were made on two rails or pieces driven into the wails, one for the side and one for the end, in the corner frequently having but one bed post. Boards on stakes driven into the ground-l. e., the floor. Meat was plenty, but breadstuff was at first brought from the older settlements on the Mississippl, Obioor Wabash. Some had little hand mills that would grind a bushel or two of rorn in a day, and they did well, the sweep raised it, and so, thump, thump, the ponnding went on till the grain was broken small enough to make bread. Another style of mortar was made of a large block, and the postle was a maul with an fron wedge in the end of it. This was used in bad weather, as it could be brought indoors, and it cut the grain rapidly. meal was sifted through a sleve, made by punching a piece of deerskin full of holes with a hot spindle and stretching it over & hoop. In the early autumn meal was grated, and the bread made of this meal and baked on a bard or in the ashes was as deliclous as heart could wish.' But finer delleacies than these were sometimes prepared. Meal was 'sarched''—that is, it was beaten very fine, then it was put into a cloth of loose, open texture, and as much as possible sifted and L. F. RUBBLE,

Most of the leisure time was spent in visitlng or hunting, horse races and protracted meetings. Much time was also spent in going to mill. A two bushel such of corn was shelled; long before daylight the next morning the bustle of getting off began, so as to make the trip in one day if possible; the sack was thrown across a horse, man or boy mounted and jogged away, followed by many cautions about crossing the creeks and much anxiety was felt if the boys fuiled to get back the next night or the following

I had better describe one of the mills the middle a large post-say eighteen luches in diameter-turns on a pivot in a block set in the ground, and is stayed by cross beams at the top; this post, about two feet from tends eight or ten feet out at each end, and to these the horses are hitched. ture of the Interior-Mortar and "Sweep" for Grinding Corn-Going to Mill-Ctothing.

Pioneer life takes its shape from the surroundings. Southern Illinois differed from the other western states in being distant from large towns, without public conveyance, having a climate neither cold nor warm, having a nearly even mixture of woodland and prairie, and being settled by not the huge poplar logs they had used in the south, but such as they could get. Sometimes the walls were "shelped down," or very slightly hewn, and sometimes the walls were built of split logs smoothed a little on the face. Some of the gracks in these walls were chinked and daubed, while some were left open to admit light. Windows were nearly or quite unknown. Some of the a little with a chopping axe, and fastened lown with wooden pins or not fastened at all. There were but three "sleepers" to the on the ends of these rested logs, one on each side; and these were called "buttin' poles," because the ends of the first course of Loards butted agulast them. Several courses of sticks set up between them, called "knees. The chimney was of split logs below and small sticks higher up, with a stone, some times only a dirt, threplace. Sometimes there was loft, made by laying ciaphoards on the joists; sometimes not; and then the joists—generally poles—were convenient for hanging up deer and deer skins, etc. Shelves resting on long pins in the walls answered for cupboard, pantry, bureau and wardrobe, as everything that might not as well be on the floor was stowed away on these shelves. There were but few bedsteads in the coun-

of the cable, the other ends of these rails being let luto a post, the entire structure were laid across from the long rail to the wall, or from rail to rail, and on these the bed-if the huppy family had any-was lald. The table wes either made of boards nailed to a rough, unwieldy frame, or it was made But many had to leat this meal in a mortar. One family had a big kettle which they used for a mortar, but generally the mortar was beaten out through the cloth. This was JOS. SIMPSON, "sarched" meel, and it was nearly as fine as of skins, often of the most fantastic shepes, The hats the men brought to this country with them were worn on Sunday As the original supply of clothing began to fail, the first resource was to make clothes of deer made excellent clothing; but our first settlers were not such good tanners, and the clothes did not do so well. The breeches soon got a tremendons knee that was a permanent thing. When the men or boys went out into the grass while the dew was on, the breeches would soon be danging around sooner, when they became dry again, they umch too short. Moccasins were almost universally worn-often being made for winter use of skins with the inir on. In varm weather all went barefoot.
